TRUST ACROSS AMERICA TOP THOUGHT LEADERS IN TRUST
TOO MANY BOSSES, TOO FEW LEADERS
Be the Change

A portrait of Rajeev Peshawaria, CEO & Executive Director of The Iclif Leadership and Governance Centre, is shown on the right side of the poster.

The world's largest taxi company owns no cars, and employs no drivers directly. The world's largest hotel service owns no properties and employs no housekeeping or room service staff. Communication has been whatsapped, memories instagrammed, and life itself facebooked. Almost everything we knew as normal in both business and social life has changed dramatically just in the last 15 years. We now live and work in the age of 24/7 connectivity where knowledge is free and abundant, everyone is empowered and everything is totally transparent.

Global population doubled from three billion to six billion between 1960 and 1999 and is expected to reach 9 billion by 2050. On one hand population explosion is creating significant pressure in terms of food, water, communal harmony and other basic necessities, on the other it is creating an abundance of human capital and talent. Thanks to 24/7 connectivity, we can now source talent and innovation far easier and quicker than ever before in human history.

Welcome to the uber-connected and uber-populated 21st century.

Even while the very nature in which people work, interact and transact has already changed beyond recognition, and despite the fact that current times are posing unprecedented challenges and opportunities, the most widely used frameworks and practices for personal career and organizational leadership seem to have remained unchanged over the last fifty years. Many of these practices were insufficient even in stable times, let alone the brave new world of today and the fast-evolving world of tomorrow. Will consumption-led economic growth, and the leadership thinking associated with it, be enough for success in the 21st century?

The Open Source Leadership session is an interactive exchange that will challenge conventional wisdom and practice around personal/organizational leadership, and offer a very different perspective – one that is much more suited to today's uberconnected and uber-populated age. It is based on the forthcoming book The Naked Autocrat, to be published by McGraw Hill New York for global release in Oct 2017.
